

What Is Your Story?

Abby Raeder

Is your project being seen?

One of the most powerful tool humans have is their ability to tell stories.

Stories offer insight into an issue that might otherwise go unnoticed.

A well-crafted story
can add color,
perspective
and have the ability to transform.

Basically, a good story is a gift to humanity.

As a photographer,
I document the grace found within all living things no matter how obscure the initial sighting.

With a compassionate eye and carefully chosen words, I attempt to cast light onto humanitarian causes around the world.

What is your story?

May I help
in providing images
and words
to champion your mission?

Do you have a limited budget and concerned that this offer may be out of your financial reach?

As I have done in the past, I work with NGO's making my service affordable.

The images within this brochure were taken in 2017 in Ipalamwa, Tanzania.

I was on assignment with the non-profit, Global Volunteers, in which I documented the aid Global provides in a remote area of Tanzania.

Their work is multi-dimensional, offering pre-natal coaching for young mothers,
access to clean water,
and medical care,
that is provided in their newly built health clinic.

I want to hear your story.

Who is Abby?

With six decades behind me I have compiled a lifetime of experiences as a daughter, sister,
wife,
grandmother,
traveler,
designer,
gallery curator,
and photographer.

I most recently was a co-founder of the Vermont Institute of Contemporary Arts in Chester, Vermont where we were committed to education and the exhibition of contemporary art.

I am now dedicating my time to storytelling and photography.

I reside in Andover, Vermont with my husband Robert.

Please contact me to discuss how I can best aid your project.
